Stanford's free app development courses are awesome. If you're interested in making an app for an iPhone or iPad, subscribe to their newly created iOS 9 course on iTunes U.This is a long-awaited update to the previous iOS 8 course. It describes how to use the iOS SDK and Apple Swift programming language, as well as the principles for developing and developing apps. Currently, only one video is available, and the outline is not complete, but you can get lectures because they are released if you subscribe to iTunes.Developing iOS 9 Apps with Swift | iTunes UMelanie PinolaContributing Writer Have you just picked up one of the best iPhones or you're still holding on to this older model, you're definitely not short on apps downloaded to your handset. The iOS App Store is one of the standout features of the iOS experience, as iPhones often get the first crack at some of the best mobile apps available. And app makers want to be sure to get their software on people's iPhones But do these apps deserve a place on your iPhone? To find out, we've gone through the virtual shelves of the App Store looking for the best iOS apps we can find. We chose apps in different categories to find a nice combination of old favorites and hidden gems that can help you do more with your iPhone or iPad. (And if you're on the lookout for ways to blow some steam, we've collected the best iOS games, too.) These are the best iOS apps you need to add to your phone or tablet now. The best iOS productivity appsAs it's taking better notes, keeping track of tasks or working more efficiently with others, there's a productivity app on your iPhone that's sure to help you get more things done. Projects 5 (Free) (Image credit: Crafty Turtle) Crafty Turtle makes a great note-making and quickfire writing app with appy named projects, now in its fifth iteration. Fire Drafts up, and the app throws you a quick blank page with the keyboard ready. New entries and notes are inserted into your Inbox so you can mark and sort them later. You can also use any of the dozens of useful quick actions and application integrations to convert your signed text notes to documents, tweets, social media notes, emails, or messages, while Inbox notes can be marked for sorting, flagged for importance, or archived. The text editor itself is highly customizable, allowing you to tweak everything from the spaceline height and margins. Premium subscription allows you to add and edit quick actions; It also adds themes and icons, while implementing workspaces and other handy productivity features. (Image credit: Moleskine) Moleskine is not just about physical magazines and notebooks anymore. The company has been empowered by iOS apps, highlighted by Flow, an impressive drawing and notebook-taking app that doesn't justice To Moleskine's notebook roots. It's so good that it managed to bag both apple design awards nod as 2019's iPad App Year.Users can draw or take notes on infinite width canvases allows you to customize everything from your writing tools (virtual pens, pencils and markers to different colors and sizes) and paper (from Moleskine traditional ivory paper to black, white and blue, with grid options and other types). With this charge, you'll get updates to cloud storage and apps. Memento ($3.99) (Image credit: Memento) If you're not impressed with the rare look of the built-in Reminders app for your iPhone, you can take a more modern look by turning to Memento. This app gives you the option to choose between a traditional vertical view of upcoming tasks and a more visually enjoyable grid look. The app also appears as a widget for iOS 13's Today screen, and you tab helpfully gives an at-a-eye look at your most important reminders. The sharing extension even allows you to create reminders from other apps. And don't worry about leaving existing reminders — Memento syncs with the Apple app so that those existing work assignments are waiting for you when you set up the new app. Note (free) (Image credit: Notions) Notion is aimed at your personal and team productivity center, which allows users to create private or shared workspaces where they can then add universal blocks that act as text snippets, bookmarks, images, toggle links, files, code snippets or discussion sections. You can easily customize a workspace, and it's also easy to drag and drop individual content blocks to where you need them without interrupting the entire document. Whether you make notes, make crunching spreadsheets, or assemble a kanban panel, Notion's powerful building blocks make things snap. The free version of Konson allows you to store and synchronize up to 1000 blocks of content, while premium plans remove content restrictions and add admin tools, permission settings and other features, depending on what level you choose. The best iOS utilitiesWhen you're on the hunt for the best iOS apps, don't forget utilities. Many of them can handle only one task, but one task can make your iPhone that much easier to use. Just Press Record ($4.99) (Image credit: Open Planet Software) A stock Voice Memos app does a good job as a voice recorder, but if you're looking for something more muscle in a vein google recorder app for Android, try just press record, a one-touch recording app for iPhone, iPad, and Apple Watch that also adds some useful features like built-in trans-tation features easy taking. Users can type from longpress to app icon, lock screen, or notification widget. The program can transcribe speech using multiple languages and the number of punctuation marks spoken. Records are sorted by date and time and can be renamed manually. Transcription allows you to search by using specific term records. You can synchronise recordings and transcriptions with iCloud, where can be shared with different apps. Calzy ($2.99) (Image credit: Waple Stuff) Calzy takes a neat approach to calculator apps in the Memory Area for quick savings and labeling calculations, variables and other bits of data that you might want to keep to easy references in multiple sessions. The app also includes a configurable keyboard, 3D touch support, scientific features, history and bookmarking, as well as multitasking support. It's an excellent all-around calculator app, and it's no surprise that the app can claim the Apple Design Award for its name. Delivery ($4.99) (Image credit: Delivery) Delivery is one of the best all-in-one package tracking apps available online, with support for various services including UPS, USPS, FedEx and DHL. A simple system allows you to enter package information using tracking numbers or iCloud synchronization, which pulls delivery information from your emails and receipts to automatically fill in the list of incoming falcons. You can then view a summary of incoming and delivered packages and ETA quick timelines; You can even find your package location on the map where it's available, or through the provider's online tracking portal. Today the widget keeps you informed about incoming packages and notifies you of package arrivals.1Blocker (Free) (Image credit: Salavat Khanov) Safari optimized 1Blocker can make mobile browsing faster and safer by blocking ads, windows, trackers and other online cruff. Instead of blocking content from downloading pages, 1Blocker works with the Safari Content Blocker API to tell the browser what to block in advance, saving time and resources. 1Blocker offers more than 115,000 blocker rules, custom regional ad blocking settings, and easy-to-use custom rule settings. Tunity (Free) (Image credit: AudioStreamTV) Can't hear TV in a noisy sports bar? Or maybe you want to listen without disturbing anyone else. Tunity is a neat app that allows you to stream live TV audio straight to your headset using your mobile device. Just open your iPhone to scan your TV, and Tunity will stream audio over your phone to headphones or Bluetooth speakers. Best iOS photo and art appsWe think the iPhone 11 Pro is the best camera phone you can get. But even a great camera deserves some great apps that allow you to tweak and edit your shots. And iPad owners in particular will appreciate the top art and drawing apps that fill their tablet's big screen. Enlight Photofox (Free) (Image credit: Lightricks) Enlight Photofox is the latest edition of the award-winning photo editing app that allows users to create stunning double exposures and other artistic manipulated effects. A barcode scanner helps capture nutritional data, and Lose It also has the ability to sync promise information with other apps. Runkeeper (Free) (Image credit: ASICS Digital) When you go on a run, make sure the Runkeeper comes with you. The app uses sensors on your iPhone to track your physical activity. (In addition to voyages, you can also use Runkeeper for cycling, hiking and anything else where you're logging distances.) he app records your pace, distance, total exercise time, calories burned and other useful metrics, and also comes with a variety of training plans, complete with reminders and gamified problems. Runkeeper becomes another must-have if you have an Apple Watch because the app works with apple smartwatch, too. (Image credit: Spacebar) Good health doesn't stop with your body, and Headspace can be a big help to your mind well. The Mindfulness app features guided meditations designed to and take a minute or two to breathe and release your head. Even if meditation isn't your thing, Free Space offers a sleep support section that looks to you in the right frame of mind before going to bed to catch some serious z's. You can download the headspace for free to see a limited selection of guided meditations, while subscriptions — $12/month or $60 if you sign up for a year — opens up a full library and experience. The best iOS entertainment appsYou don't have to rely on Apple's built-in apps like Podcasts or subscription services like Apple Music and Apple TV Plus to find something to enjoy in your downtime. We've found some entertainment apps that deserve space among the best iOS apps. JustWatch (Free) (Image credit: JustWatch) Online TV and movie streaming used to be simple: go to Netflix for almost everything. But as the online video streaming market becomes increasingly fragmented and producers and networks scramble for exclusives to make their streaming service stand out, it can be a pain to follow where to go to watch a particular show or movie series. Enter JustWatch, a service that tracks the latest offerings from 37 different streaming services, showing where and when to watch a particular TV show that covers big names like Netflix, Hulu, HBO Go and Amazon Prime Video. You can search for a specific series or browse for news. The app also offers the latest movie trailers and showtimes, complete with one-click Fandango bookings for your local cinema. Serial Box (Free) (Image credit: Serial Box Publishing)Instead of paying for a complete ebook or audiobook, Serial Box gives you the option to purchase or subscribing to shorter, episodic content in bite-sized pieces of novels that are perfect for your commute or break time. Serial Box offers a range of genres, from drama to fantasy and sci-fi, with the first episode free and subsequent episodes costing $1.99 — which includes both text and audio versions. You can get the full story at a discount using a seasonal pass. With offerings like Witch, which came out of the cold, Bookburners and Tremontaine and highly configurable reader and audiobook player mode. Serial Box is an interesting take on digital books. Singray Qello (Free) (Image credit: Singray Group) Although there are many apps for streaming songs and albums, it is harder for those who want to listen or watch concerts. Enter Singray Qello, which allows you to stream live recordings from a wide array of artists including The Queen, The Rolling Stones and Coldplay. You can also turn to the app to see concert films, documentaries, and live music show episodes like MTV Disconnected. The free app level includes one or more free songs from each show, 30 plus channels for concert moments and highlights and selections of free concerts. The $7.99-a-month All-Access Pass unlocks all libraries of concerts and documentaries, as well as the ability to or create a curator of Setlists.Libby credit: Overdrive) Why spend a ton of money on ebooks if your local library already has a digital media lending system? Libby is the latest incarnation of Overdrive's popular digital media management system, allowing users to borrow ebooks and audiobooks from participating libraries. Simply sign in with a library card, and then you can browse your library's digital media collection, allowing you to search for titles, set up holds, borrow e-books and audiobooks with touch, and return or expand the lend just as easily. You can preview books from an app, download borrowed names, or stream them to your phone or tablet if you want to save space. The best iOS travel and weather appsYt your iPhone can be a great companion, especially with some of these travel-oriented apps. And know the weather of your destination using the top weather app. Funnel (free) (Image credit: Funnel) If you're on a lot of traveling, you need a funnel for your iPhone. Of course, the app will allow you to search for airfares and hotel fares. But Hopper's really power lies in its ability to predict future discounts. Enter where you travel and where you went to, and Hopper gives you a color-coded calendar showing when is the best time to go. Choose a date that you have in mind, and Funnel will tell you if the rate is good or not — and more importantly, when it may rise or decrease. Hopper's must-have app if you want to stretch your travel budget further. Skiplagged (Free) (Image credit: Skiplagged) Skiplagged takes a different approach to the same goal of reducing your travel expenses. This app uses hidden city flights where flyers get off at landing rather than at their destination. Users enter your origins and destination, and Skiplagged will show you the cost of direct flights as well as any cheaper hidden city flights that are your intended destination as a layover. Alert? Stick hand luggage as all checked bags go all the way to the flight destination. Skiplagged also allows you to book hotels, including last minute deals and special offers. Carrot Weather ($4.99) (Image credit: Carrot Weather) Snark is a wonderful way to make terrible predictions easier for ears. At least that's the premise behind Carrot Weather, the iOS weather forecasting app. Gamers familiar with the GLaDOS character from the site series will love the Carrot Weather narrator because it mocks your unhappiness for living through the rain, sleet and excessive sun. You'll also find a lot of tie-ins on the rest of iOS, such as integration with messages to send snarky predictions to your friends. You've probably got Twitter, Facebook and the usual array of social networking apps installed on your iPhone. But don't forget some of these iOS apps to connect to others. Flipboard (Free) (Image credit: Flipboard) Articles on the web may look a little monotic, but Flipboard jazzes things up with magazine-style layout and feeds curly for you. Choose the themes you want to read about and Flipboard creates a smart magazine by dragging articles from across the web based on what you're looking for. The app looks especially good on newer iPhones, as Flipboard has optimized ighed displays for Apple phones since the iPhone X's 2017 debut. Slowly (free) (Image credit: Slowly Communications) The old-fashioned pen-pal gets a modern take with a slowly, social app that provides a slower, more deliberate messaging experience that might otherwise get lost in our modern era of instant gratification. Users create a simple profile with an avatar, location, and list of interests; Slowly will then match you with users with similar interests. Unlike traditional messaging apps, slowly adds a message time delay element, encouraging longer forms to be written at a conscious pace. In addition, the app has a stamp collection feature, and each message has stamps based on the sender's location, as well as special seasonal postage stamps or premium postage stamps that are available as in-app purchases. You can also share a limited number of photos a day if a friend of your pen has agreed to receive them. Unfold (free) (Image credit: Unfold Creative) Unfold provides a clean and easy-to-use creative tool that focuses on creating slick and polished Instagram story-ready presentations. Download the app, and you'll get an arsenal of elegant and elegant templates that you can apply for photos. This is a no-guff approach that focuses on simple and stylish, screening wacky for the classy, with 25 free templates and five fonts applicable for photo and video presentations; are even more available as in-app purchases.
